

Good afternoon everyone.
It's nice to see you all on this lovely day.

Before getting into our presentation, I want to say thank you to the clients who have allowed us students to work with you.

This has been a great learning experience so we appreciate you for agreeing to let us work on your websites and being here for us to present our projects to you today.

On this assignment, I have had the privilege to work with some truly talented individuals.

Each has brought different insight and skills which helped us get this project to where you will see today.

So allow me now to introduce you all to our team starting with Hannah who is our Design and Support Specialist.
Next we have Caitlin our lead design,
Breland - our Lead Developer, and Ann, myself, the project manager.

These past couple of months my team and I were given the opportunity to work with an organization called Our House which some of you may be familiar with.

They are a well-respected non-profit charity in the community who's primary goal is to help individuals and families that are facing issues related to homelessness.

Beyond being a resource for those in need of immediate shelter, Our House also offers a host of programs geared towards helping people sustain housing independence by providing clients with access to financial education, childcare, mental health services, employment assistance, meals and more.

Being assigned to this incredible organization meant that our team had a responsibility to provide not only our client with a quality product, but for those throughout the community who would be visiting the site looking to learn about Our House and the services they offer or seeking information such as how to volunteer or donate.

With that awareness we given the task of redesigning the Our House website to coincide with a nationwide rebranding.

The site we would create would need to feature revamped designs, a new color scheme, animations, updated logos, and be optimized for speed.

To tell you more about the steps we took after our initial client meetings and how we got started with the process of redesigning an already established site. I will hand this over to Breland.

So as you can see, we really tried to consider the needs of our client and we did our best to incorporate their ideas into the design we were able to create for them.

We were lucky to have a client familiar with website design so we were met by someone with understanding of our capabilities and limitations.

Overall we are confident in our redesign and we hope that you have enjoyed our presentation.

We also hope and that our client Sierra and her team at Our House is pleased with our interpretation of their vision.

Thank you again for allowing us the opportunity to collaborate with you at such an important time in your organization's journey.

So with that I will open up for questions anyone may have for us.
